The official website of the National Investigation Agency, the country's premier investigation agency dealing with cases of terrorism, touched a milestone when it crossed more than 4 million hits recently, since the time it was revamped in January last year. The user-friendly nature of the website, nia.gov.in, and the plethora of information it hosts are the main reasons behind its massive popularity. The information posted on the website is being used by a host of people to obtain information related to terrorist organizations and terror-related cases in India. Those accessing the NIA data include journalists, researchers, various government organizations as well as foreign law-enforcement agencies. The website not only carries information about the most wanted terrorists, but is also unique because of NIA's practice of uploading, on the website, chargesheets of the cases sent up for prosecution by it. These charge-sheets have become an invaluable source of information for persons and agencies interested in the subject.

★ The NIA website has become an important medium of interface between the Agency and citizens and the Agency has been receiving a wealth of information from the general public through its dedicated email id: info.nia@gov.in.
